

Would you rather be on stage or in the audience?

I would rather be in the audience because I normally don't like being in the spotlight. I do think that I have the capabilities of being a leader but standing in front of hundreds of people is nothing I would look forward to.

My sister really likes that, and I think she nails it every time she is on stage.

Vanishing in the crowd is what I like at concerts, not attracting a lot of attention to me but enjoying the show. Here I want to mention that this is completely different when I am in a sporty car. Then I could never have enough people looking after me driving past them.

I rather enjoy sitting in the audience, looking at what happens, being the observer. Not only that, but I am also more the quiet type around multiple people or friends because I like to listen. How other people talk and the way they talk tells me a lot about how they are feeling, and I can react to that.